Digitals? Low-Res? High-Res? What's the difference?

Low-Res stands for low resolution digital files. These digital files have been reduced in size but not in quality. The smaller size allows for quicker online viewing.

High-Res (or sometimes known as Full-Res) stands for high-resolution are what is needed when printing. Our high-res images get you good looking images from wallet to poster.

Looking at these two digital file types on your computer side-by-side, there is no visual difference. There will however be a difference when you try to upload images online or print images.

One is not better than the other, each has a specific purpose.
